Sculpting serving wares evolved from wanting to create tools that create connection. My process is to develop a conversation with the materials, as in exploring how the thin flat brass sheet used in these pieces can be pushed and pulled to create depth, strength, and sensual forms. This organic approach, made by hand, leaves behind nuanced details that documents the process as well as conveys the intimate sense of time and ritual interweaving the existence and connection of the maker, user, and utensil object.
